

“Are you envious because I am generous?”

MATTHEW 20:15

Praying with This Sunday's Gospel

Jesus tells of a landowner who keeps returning to the marketplace, inviting workers into his vineyard from dawn until late afternoon. At day's end, each worker receives the same wage. Those who began early are not cheated; they receive exactly what was promised. Still, they grumble when the latecomers receive the same gift. Their eyes have shifted from the landowner's faithfulness to another person's good fortune. What began as gratitude becomes comparison.

God's generosity does not fit neatly inside our calculations. Isaiah reminds us that God's ways are higher than ours, and the Gospel shows a generosity that reaches people even at the last hour. This does not make faithful labor meaningless. It frees us to serve without treating grace as a prize we must defend. When another person is welcomed, forgiven, or blessed, we can receive that joy as evidence of God's goodness rather than as a threat to our own place. This week, notice when comparison begins to narrow your heart. Pause, thank God for what you have received, and ask for the freedom to celebrate the good given to someone else.

Workers enter the vineyard at different hours, but the landowner gives each one the same wage. Listen for what the workers' complaint reveals about comparison, justice, and generosity.

Before Mass: where do I struggle to rejoice when someone else receives generosity?

SAINT OF THE WEEK

Saint Cornelius

After Pope Fabian was martyred, persecution left the Church in Rome without a pope for fourteen months. Cornelius was elected in 251 and soon faced a painful question: could Christians who had denied the faith under persecution be reconciled to the Church?

Working with his friend Saint Cyprian, Cornelius defended a path of repentance and mercy against those who said such sinners could never return. He was later exiled and died in 253 from the hardships he endured. His witness reminds us that truth and mercy belong together, and that no sincere return to God should be met with a closed door.

FOR LITTLE ONES When someone makes a mistake, ask Jesus to help you welcome them back with mercy.

FOR OUR YOUNGEST DISCIPLES

A landowner invited people to work in his vineyard all through the day. When evening came, he paid every worker the same amount, even those who arrived last. Jesus shows us that God's generosity is a gift, not a contest.

DRAW THE VINEYARD AND ADD A WORKER FOR EACH TIME THE LANDOWNER WENT OUT TO INVITE SOMEONE.
